

Art Event: Kerry Tribe @ LAXART

Shana Nys Dambrot

Kerry Tribe: "Milton Torres Sees A Ghost" @ LAXART

Saturday February 5th, 2011 - Saturday April 23rd, 2011

Opening reception: Saturday February 5th, 2011 6PM - 8PM

As part of LA><ART's ongoing collaborations with the Hammer Museum, LA><ART is pleased to present three concurrent projects by artists included in All of this and nothing, the sixth Hammer Invitational jointly curated by the museum's senior curator, Anne Ellegood, and chief curator, Douglas Fogle. The artists in the exhibition explore philosophical questions about being in the world, heightening our awareness of the many mysteries that surround us and favoring intuition and poetry over rationality and logic. The artists closely consider and make visible to viewers the process of art-making by playing with scale, the ephemeral quality of their materials, the nature of time and language, and the relationships between the objects that they create. In doing so, the artists propose that works of art can inspire us to contemplate and to question, offering more possibilities than certitudes, more curiosities than established arguments. They conceptually and emotionally invest ephemeral and everyday materials and occurrences with newfound poetic meanings while offering a thoughtful meditation on the fragility of our lives and the objects that make up the world around us.

At LA><ART, Los Angeles-based artist Dianna Molzan will paint-splatter the building's façade with a range colors, creating a large-scale site-specific work that will produce a rough and fuzzy-edged "X" through the absence of paint. Through this negative space, unmarked, Molzan highlights the physical location of LA><ART with a void, reversing the function of a signifier in mapped geographies.

LA><ART is located at 2640 S. La Cienega Blvd. Los Angeles, CA 90034
